As for his former teammates, Cox can list some of the greatest to ever don a Viking jersey. He came up with Fran Tarkenton, and was there when No. 10 returned to Minnesota. He watched the "Purple People Eaters" from the sidelines, and said "They were better than they were because of the linebackers. They had behind that. Those guys were just as good."

Some are not so well. Carl Eller is haunted by his demons of substance abuse and pain from his playing days.

Wally Hilgenberg, one of those linebackers, is battling ALS, or "Lou Gehrig's Disease."

But some have done incredible things, including Minnesota Supreme Court Justice Alan Page.

"Alan was just a freak," Cox said. "He didn't need to play football. But he was so big, that he could blow right through you. It was just like a true match."
